

The Misadventures of Batty the Cat

When Batty the cat was born, he was the smallest out of his six brothers and sisters. Batty was born on a farm in a barn near the hay stack in the corner. Farmer Joe had put a blanket out for Battys mom, Pickles. Pickles was named Pickles because she was born near a pickle barrel one summer evening. Much like Battys mother Pickles, Batty was born on a warm summer night. Farmer Steve had heard Pickles howling really loud as she delivered her litter of kittens. Batty was the last to be born. Batty was a black cat with a little patch of white under his tummy. Even though Batty was the smallest, he still wanted to drink as much milk as he could from his mommy.

When Batty and his litter were old enough, Farmer Ted took the box of kittens to the park and put up a sign that read FREE KITTENS TO A GOOD HOME. The litter of kittens went really quick. Except for Batty. Batty was the last one left. Well, why wont anyone take me home with them? Batty thought to himself. Im just as good as any other cat. Batty was sad because he thought no one wanted him. But, then, he looked up from the box and he saw someone looking down at him smiling. It was a man. Well, hello there little guy. The smiling man said. You look like you need someone to love you. He then picked up Batty and held him and rubbed his cheek against Battys face. Batty was excited. Someone had finally wanted to take him home! You are perfect! The man said as he walked back to his car. His new owner took him to his car and placed Batty on the car seat next to him. Batty liked feeling close to his new owner. So, he climbed up the side of the car seat and curled up around his new owners shoulders, where that would become his favorite place to lie when he was tired. Batty was able to look out the window and see the big world around him as he was driven to his new home. The world was such a big place! They had driven for a while and finally the car pulled into a driveway. It was a small farmhouse with a lot of land around it. There was even a forest behind the farmhouse.
