INTROD-83 Competencies Defined

Competencies and competences have often been used interchangeably when the subject of competencies is discussed. There is a difference in the terminology. Competencies refer to the combination of skills, knowledge/experience/behaviors/attitudes that a job incumbent possesses while a competence is the level of excellence in such competency, as exercised or displayed by the job incumbent.. Often, when discussing or reviewing the subject of Competencies, the relevance of standard arises. A standard is the minimum acceptable level of competence (in a specific competency) expected of a job incumbent in the workplace. A brief explanation is made of the difference between the above mentioned terms in this book. Those interested in more details are encouraged to read the two companion books on the subject of Competencies. Examples of Clustering of competencies under a major Competency and Leveling in each competency are also shown. This book is written with the primary objective of assisting Managers understand what competencies are by the provision of easy to comprehend definitions in simple language. 83 Competencies are identified and descriptions provided for each. The companion book referred to above is titled How to apply competencies in the Workplace and deals with the application of competencies in the various facets of managing employees in the Organization.
